OUR ROOTS

Howard Pilcher, an artist by trade, designed and crafted leatherwork including billfolds, belts, checkbook covers, and purses from his home in South Sioux City, NE in 1976. He and his wife Allene attended Powwows, selling his custom made items.
After demand grew for his craftwork, and with the request for additional hard to acquire items, the couple opened their first store in their home, selling these items to the public and the Native Americans on the reservations in the area.
Eventually, the couple acquired an account with Pendleton Blankets and moved their business to Fort Calhoun, NE opening their first store front in 1987. They stayed three years and moved again, this time to Omaha to be closer to their daughter Mary and three grandchildren.

Today, their daughter Mary owns and operates the business with the help of her three children. Pilcher's continues to support the craftsmanship of Native Americans.
